Mental Hygiene Topic of Prof. Smith at Kiwanis

With an exceptionally fine turnout of members, a most successful meeting of the Kiwanis Club took place on Tuesday evening at the regular weekly meeting.

Prof. H. E. Smith, Ph.D., of the University, was the speaker of the evening, and gave a most interesting and enlightening talk on the phases of Mental Hygiene, which he said really meant Mental Health.

The club was favored with two delightful solos from Prof. Touche, accompanied by Mrs. C. Condie, whose contribution to the program was greatly appreciated. The attendance prize was won by Vice-President Dr. Gunderson.

In the course of the evening, the past president's report was presented to Kiwanian Bill Barry by the President, John E. Fraser. Secretary C. H. Russell read a splendid report of the last year's activities of the Club, the boys' camp at Pigeon Lake in summer and the dispensing of Christmas Cheer along with the ladies' organization to 270 children, mostly out west, being some of the outstanding features.

Dr. Smith in his address on Mental Health, told of his experiences at a clinic held in one of the schools that afternoon. His students had worked up the history and records of some seven boys who were finding difficulties in their studies and causing anxiety to their teachers.

At the clinic the doctor found out in one case that the father of the boy was to blame. Instead of giving encouragement he implied his son was good for nothing except for laboring work, thus derailing the boy and preventing him from trying to study.

In another case, a boy's elder sister, who was exceptionally bright and intelligent, was to blame for continually calling her younger brother down by always telling him he was stupid, dumb and no good. Constantly impressing the boy in this thoughtless way had its effect in nullifying any effort on the boy to try and do better.

Instead of derogatory remarks, words of encouragement are the antidote. Dr. Smith spoke of the pleasure and pain therapy. Striving after pleasure and seeking to avoid anything that was painful or disagreeable. He spoke of the conscious department of the mind as against the unconscious department of the brain cells, and explained several of the theories advanced by the great scientist Freud.

In closing, Dr. Smith said his work at the University was to teach psychology to the teachers in training, so that teachers might become more valuable in understanding the minds of their pupils at school.

The address proved extremely interesting and valuable from an educational point of view.

WETASKIWIN TO HAVE SCHOOL MUSICAL FESTIVAL

In 1908 a few enterprising musicians in the city of Edmonton decided it would be to the advantage of music in Alberta to hold a Provincial Musical Festival. After a great amount of uphill work, these pioneers were successful in holding, in May of that year, the first Provincial Musical Festival ever held in the Dominion of Canada. We need not take time nor space here to tell of the wonderful growth of the festivals, which have been held every year since.

Some years later, the people of the Peace River district agreed to hold a festival of their own, and this has also proven very successful, and has become an annual event. The movement has spread until now a number of districts are holding School Musical Festivals annually.

Mr. Scofield, Inspector of Schools for this district, with the assistance of Mrs. Cootie of Leduc, as president, and Miss Eva Walker of Wetaskiwin, as secretary, together with a representative committee, are planning to hold one of these Festivals in Wetaskiwin some time during the month of May.

The syllabus of competitions is being compiled and will soon be ready for mailing. It will contain classes for elocution and dramatics, as well as singing, and will be open to all schools in this inspectorate. These number 175. The district extends from Leduc on the north to Ponoka on the south, east as far as Wynne, and west to the end of settlement.

It is hoped that all School Boards and public-spirited citizens will get behind this festival and help to bring it to a successful culmination. Someone has said that a singing people are a happy and contented one, and we cannot hope for a more loving Alberta unless we install the love of music in the hearts of our children, our coming men and women.

Weddings

NEWSON-ADAMS

A quiet wedding was solemnized at All Saints Pro-Cathedral, Edmonton, on January 13th, by Rev. Canon Pierce-Goulding, when Miss Queenie Adams, formerly of Wetaskiwin, was united in marriage to Mac Newson. Mr. and Mrs. Newson left after the ceremony from the groom's farm, west of Leduc, where they will take up their residence.

WESTLUND-LINDAHL

A pretty wedding took place on Thursday, Jan. 13th, at the Baptist Church parsonage, Wetaskiwin, when Margaret Lindahl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christ. Lindahl of Calmar, Alta., was united in holy matrimony to Oscar Walter, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Westlund, also of Calmar, by Rev. P. M. Meyer. The bride was attended by Miss Margaret Westlund of Broken. Mr. Robert Westlund, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

WETASKIWIN OLDTIMER ATTENDS MEETING BY AIR

Mr. Frank Lucas, after spending a holiday in Edmonton, accepted an aeroplane ride from his nephew, Pilot Jack Malan. The latter made a perfect landing in Mr. Lucas' field, before Mr. Lucas was comfortably seated, and also in plenty of time for his meeting. Having travelled the old trail in the early days, first by Red River cart, and more recently by motor car, Mr. Lucas states there is no method of travel so smooth and speedy as by plane, also affording a beautiful view of the country. Pilot Malan took other members of the family up before returning to the city.

WILLINGDONS SAY FAREWELL TO CANADIANS

On the eve of his departure from the Dominion capital, His Excellency the Governor General has given out a farewell message to the people of Canada. It is a simple, direct expression of gratitude, on behalf of Viscountess Willingdon and himself, for "the constant kindness, courtesy and friendship which has always been shown us by all with whom we have been privileged to come in contact, from the highest to the lowest in the land. I leave you with the profound conviction that the basic condition of Canada is absolutely sound," declares His Excellency, after making brief reference to the present depressed conditions and his confidence that difficulties confronting the Canadian people will soon be overcome and that the Dominion will move forward to a still greater development.

FIRE VISITED WINFIELD THREE BUILDINGS DESTROYED

Three buildings were totally destroyed by a fire which broke out in the kitchen of the Winfield Hotel on Friday at about 10 p.m. The real cause of the fire is unknown but it is suspected the woodwork caught from an overheated range. No one was in the building at the time, Mr. J. A. Hallgren, the proprietor, and his two daughters, having left a short while before for a dance at Pandey.

The alarm was spread by Mr. Clarke and his daughter Margaret, who accidentally discovered "the blaze." However, the fire had made too much headway to be extinguished, and rapidly spread to the adjoining buildings on each side—the Post Office and Mr. Carter's residence, and the hardware store owned by Mr. Roy Gibbons.

The mail was all saved and the hardware, also the personal effects of Mr. and Mrs. Carter and Mr. and Mrs. Gibbons, who lived in the back of the store.

The general store of the Winfield Trading Co. also narrowly escaped the fate of the neighboring buildings. The groceries and dry goods were hastily removed to a place of safety.

In the meantime a crowd of men, women and children had congregated and were at work carrying buckets of water from nearby wells, throwing it on the blaze. Had there been a better water supply and a means of transporting it, both the Post Office and store might have been saved.

The Hotel and its contents and the store were partially saved, but the Post Office building was a complete loss. Nothing was saved of the personal effects of Mr. Hallgren and his daughters.

FISH DINNERS ARE PLENTIFUL IN PONOKA NOW

Ponoka, Alta., Jan. 13.—Never in the annals of past Ponoka history have Ponoka citizens witnessed the unusual sight of shoal upon shoal of suckers and jackfish, weighing from one to 24 pounds, floundering in helpless manner in the open water in the Battle river.

PAYLOAD PLANE LONG OVERDUE ON OCEAN HOP

New York, Jan. 12.—The cold expanse of the Eastern Atlantic ocean swallowed up any news Sunday night of Mrs. Beril Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren, long overdue in the Azores Islands in the seaplane "Trade Wind."

The fliers left Bermuda at 11:15 a.m. E.S.T., Saturday, in continuation of their projected payload flight from the United States to Paris, and expected to cover the 3,045 miles between Hamilton and Horta, Azores, in about 21 hours.

That should have put them in the island metropolis at about 3:15 p.m. Eastern standard time, yet as the afternoon wore on they did not appear and the residents who had frantically searched the harbor to see them come down left in disappointment.

The W.M.S. of First United Church will hold their regular meeting in the church on Tuesday afternoon next at 3 o'clock.

The annual meeting of the congregation of the First United Church is being held at the church on Wednesday evening of this week. A report of the meeting will be given in our next issue.

The many friends of Mrs. W. J. Deltz regret to learn that she had the misfortune to fall downstairs on Monday last, and received several painful injuries. Fortunately, no bones were broken.

Sunday night Rev. A. L. Elliott received a telegram conveying the message that his brother, Thomas G. Elliott, had passed from this life at Belleville, Ont. This is the first break from a family of seven boys and two girls.

V. C. French returned Wednesday morning from Regina, where he represented the Wetaskiwin Kiwanis Club at the conference of representatives from the Clubs forming the Western Canada district. The thermometer registered 18 degrees below zero at Regina on Tuesday morning.

The death of Mrs. Wm. D. Penley, formerly of Quilla, Ont., occurred at her home in Kellogg, Sask., recently. Deceased had been in failing health for some time, and had a stroke, which resulted in her death. Besides her husband, she leaves five sons and three daughters, namely: Wm. Norman and Clarence of Kellogg, Sask.; John of Calgary and Albert of Yorkford, Mrs. Blake Wright of Detroit, Mrs. Alvin Elliott of Wetaskiwin, and Mrs. F. Collison of Saskatchewan.

Peter Campbell, who has been in charge of the work at the Forestry branch at Saunders, Alta., for several years, informs The Times that he and Mrs. Campbell have been transferred to Camrose, where he will have charge of the Game Protection and various other administrative work at the Forestry branch. He recently transferred to the province. He extends a cordial invitation to all Wetaskiwin friends to visit them at any time at the Forestry station while on their way to and from Banff.

ERICH ANDERSON, WEMBLEY, NEW WHEAT CHAMPION

Edmonton, Jan. 13.—Nosing out his neighbor, Herman Trelle, winner of the sweepstakes for wheat at the 1930 Chicago Hay and Grain Show, a newcomer in the ranks of Alberta's grain show men, Erich Anderson of Wembley, took the Grand Championship for this grain at the Provincial Seed Fair here Monday. Trelle won the oats championship and Norman Peck of Leduc, the barley honor.

Competent critics who attended the recent Royal Agricultural Winter Fair declared the exhibition here of a higher calibre than the All-Canadian event. Certainly it is outstanding for quality and there are no inferior samples on display.

Before making the championship awards, the judges gave Anderson two first prizes for wheat on samples of certified Reward weighing 68 pounds per bushel. One of these was in competition with over 50 entries.

The new wheat champion also took two firsts for oats, a second for oats, a first for barley and a first for field peas.

A former Canadian wheat champion, Nels Linden of Wetaskiwin, took a first in one of the oats classes.

LIVERY BARN COMPLETELY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Otto Olsen's livery barn was completely destroyed by fire on Thursday morning last. The blaze was seen at about 3:30, certainly it is outstanding for quality and there are no inferior samples on display.

It is rumored that an effort was made to set fire to Vic Johnson's barn the same night, but without success.

Amalgamation in a $50,000,000 corporation of the telephone systems of the C.P.R. and C.N.R. is being considered by the two parties.

The thirtieth anniversary of the establishment of this branch was on January 16th, 1931. Business was commenced in the "Merchants' Bank of Canada," now merged with the Bank of Montreal, in a small frame building on Railway Street West. At that time Wetaskiwin was a village of about 400 people. The village was drawing trade from a large territory, and there were four hotels, three elevators and a flour mill. A year later the Bank moved from Railway Street to more pretentious premises in the Hull block at the south-east corner of Pearce and MacDonald streets.

When the Canadian Pacific Railway completed its line from Saskatchewan in 1905, Wetaskiwin was made a divisional point, and in the following year, when the population had reached 2,500, it received the status of a city. Many important buildings were erected, that year among them being the Bank's present premises at the north-east corner of Pearce and MacDonald streets. In the same year, also, Wetaskiwin was made a judicial centre, and a fine Court House was erected. The new city continued to boom and large sums were borrowed for the installation of sewerage and water works, electric lighting and sidewalks.

During all this growth and development the Bank has been and continues to be an important contributing factor.

John A. Brown, now of Camrose, has the distinction of being the first savings depositor.

V. C. James, the first manager, took an active part in the affairs of the town, and was succeeded by H. E. Todd in 1907. Among other managers and members of the staff of the Bank who have served at Wetaskiwin are: R. J. Dinning, Liquor Commissioner of the Province of Alberta, Frank Pike, manager at Edmonton branch, H.S. Craig, H. W. Nesbitt, now assistant manager of St. Peter and St. James Streets Branch, Montreal, N. D. MacPhayden, now manager at Galt, Ontario, Fred M. Pike, now manager at Port Arthur, and Albert of Yorkford, Mrs. Blake Wright of Detroit, Mrs. Alvin Elliott of Wetaskiwin, and Mrs. F. Collison of Saskatchewan.

YOUR RESOLUTION.

"Resolved that my support to the home-town paper in 1931 will be 100 per cent."

Now this would be a rare and vital resolution and in the keeping of it there would be great reward. Rare because you have never before seen or heard of it; vital, because the future of the small town largely depends upon the keeping of it.

A few years ago an able and interesting article was written by an editor of a small town weekly in Alberta. The business men of the town were complaining because of the heavy toll being taken by mail order houses. During the year the combined amount spent by the local merchants in advertising was only a fraction of that spent, in the same area, mark you, by one mail order house. The advertisements of the local merchants had few, if any, illustrations, and lack of care in their preparation was very much in evidence. On the other hand the catalogue of the mail order house was attractively illustrated and written in a concise and gripping style. The article clearly demonstrated why the home town merchant and the home town were losing out.

A prominent merchant in a small British Columbia town does not advertise in the home town paper. He contends that it is a waste of money, because the people in the town and district know where to find him. The people also know where to find the mail order house, but the mail order house is alive to the necessity of keeping its message constantly before the people. Here I was told from a well informed source that more money went out of town for merchandise than was spent locally.

A little reflection reveals the fact that the home town merchant is not saving that which he does not spend in advertising, but that he is actually paying for the advertising done by the mail order house. How come? Part of the net earnings of the mail order house in a given section is used in advertising in that section. Because of effective advertising on the one hand, and the lack of it on the other, that money is being withheld from the home town merchant, so that in the last analysis the mail order house advertises at the expense of the home town merchant.

Now I am not thinking of advertising in the sense of contracting for paying for and "filling" space in the local paper. I am thinking of a wide-awake merchant presenting his message each week to the buying public in a compelling style. And if the advertiser would just visualize an audience of anywhere from a few hundred to a few thousand people he would soon get away from the tragic practice of "something to fill up this week."

Many of our once thriving towns are going to stage a come back in 1931. This is going to be done through advertising. Advertising took the business away while the home town merchant slumbered and slept, but the home town merchant has been aroused and the lost business is going to be won back through advertising. More and better advertising will make a prosperous paper and a prosperous town.

And this is why the people of the home town should resolve to give a 100 per cent support to the home town paper this and every year.

SMALLPOX AND VACCINATION

What is vaccination? Most of us fortunately for ourselves are vaccinated in this country, the Canadian Social Hygiene Council's lecturer intimated in a recent broadcast in connection with the free Radio College of Health series which that organization issues. Proceeding to tell how vaccination is secured and administered he explained that first doctors secure a healthy calf. This is carefully and well fed and kept scrupulously clean while it is treated with the germs of a disease known as cowpox. The calf develops a mild case of this disease. Because it is healthy its body begins to fight the cowpox germs and it develops what are known as antibodies, in order to do so. It is these antibodies that the doctors want to be developed in the blood of human beings because since there is a similarity between cowpox and smallpox these antibodies produce a reaction which enables the human being to successfully fight smallpox germs so that these germs are not even permitted to begin their work of causing smallpox.

It is important to remember this as the whole theory of vaccination—the process which has saved hundreds of thousands of lives—and it is summed up in these simple words: "The process of preparing the vaccine is very interesting. When the calf is ready the doctors chloroform it, wash it, examine it to make sure that its internal organs are absolutely free from disease, for if they are not so free the entire process must be gone over again with another calf. Then they take from it what is called green virus. From it every trace of germ-life is removed. It is carefully ground with a mixture of glycerine and carbolic acid through a very fine bronze wire gauze. All germs are thereby killed. What is left is a creamy substance which is kept on ice until ready to be used on human beings, but first it is thoroughly tested on animals.

Doctor Hastings, for many years Medical Officer of Health for the City of Toronto, and one of the best known public health officials on the continent recently said:

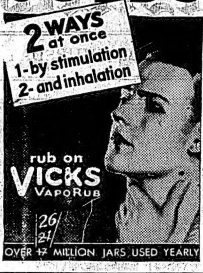

"Of approximately 250,000 vaccinated in the City I defy anyone to produce evidence of one single death that has been brought about by vaccination. I defy them to produce a case where an arm was even threatened. There is not as much danger from infection from vaccination as there is danger from the scratch of a pin." Dr. Victor Heiser of the Rockefeller Foundation, said in a letter to the Social Hygiene Council: "Ten million vaccinations were made in the Philippines without loss of life or limb. Foreigners who were unvaccinated invariably contracted smallpox. I recall especially that several who declined vaccination died within a short period after their arrival on the islands. Prior to vaccination there was an annual death rate from smallpox of approximately 40,000. Upon the completion of the 10,000,000 vaccinations referred to above, this death rate was reduced to a few hundred, and those deaths occurred almost entirely among persons who were unvaccinated."

EXPECTS RAPID SALMON SALE

Vancouver, Jan. 12.—There should be no fear regarding the disposal of the 1930 British Columbia canned salmon pack in the opinion of Major J. A. Motherwell, chief supervisor of fisheries, who declares that there is not likely to be a serious surplus. Although the 1930 pack was the largest on record it was only 157,000 cases more than the previous record pack of 1926. In that year sales were satisfactory from a standpoint of quantity and orderly marketing. Major Motherwell stated.

Regarding marketing conditions for canned salmon, it was pointed out that in 1926 the world pack was 70,518,814 cases. This exceeded the estimated 1930 world pack by 300,000 cases, indicating that contrary to some opinions, there was no surplus pack in 1930.

YOUR HEALTH—A NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION

Now that the milestone of the New Year has been passed, the order of the day is the keeping of the good resolutions which a time-honored custom holds for many of us. There is one good resolution on which more than any other depends the happiness of the entire family, and which is within the power of everyone to keep. It is the resolve to live more closely according to the simple laws which govern perfect health. Once get the habit when the children are small, and these valuable health rules will become second nature, to be observed unconsciously. As life proceeds we get an increasing value on the worth of good health and see in the golden hours of youth and early infancy the ideal time for the forming of life-long habits.

Mothers find it sometimes difficult to inspire children with the desire to keep clean their ears and neck to say nothing about their teeth, but by keeping what is known as the Health Game with the accompanying Record, many a youngster has unconsciously developed a cleanliness complex which affords his entire family a deal of satisfaction. The Junior Red Cross offers a splendid system of daily hygiene to all its members. The simple rules are printed on a chart. By means of a record, which the child himself marks as a point of honor daily, the little duties are observed.

As one parent said to the writer: "I was distracted with my family they were so tiresome about the little details of personal cleanliness. When the new teacher introduced the Junior Red Cross into the school there was the greatest difference in the world, they actually competed as to who would be the best groomed in the morning, and now it is a pleasure to see them."

If you desire a Health Game record with a Health Rule Card, write to the Junior Red Cross, 407 Civic Block, Edmonton, and start the New Year right. Then use influence with your local teacher to have a Junior Red Cross branch in your school.

THE PRINTER'S ERRORS

Typographical errors which are found occasionally in the best registered newspapers, as the Editor of The Times is well aware, are a source of amusement to those not directly concerned.

Possibly because of its numerous editors, the Bible seems to have suffered from the typographical error more frequently than any other book. There is the famous Vinegar Bible, which takes its nickname from the running title of the twentieth chapter of St. Luke's gospel, where it reads, "The Parable of the Vinegar" instead of "The Parable of the Vineyard."

The so-called Wicked Bible was one of the most notorious blunders in literature. In the reign of Charles I, an edition of the Bible was printed with the "not" left out of the seventh commandment. Whether the omission was due to an imphic humor, or was an innocent mistake on the part of the King's printers, Robert Barker and Martin Lucas, were held sternly to account and fined $1500 by the Court of High Commission.

The edition was promptly suppressed, but six copies are known to have escaped. One copy is now safe in the British Museum. Another is in the University Library at Glasgow and the others are sequestered in private libraries.

A classical example of newspaper errors is told about a colonel who fought in the American Civil War. He was described as a "battle-scarred veteran." This imputation on his courage brought him to the office with a big stick and the demand that it be reprinted with the offensive remark corrected. It was, but another misprint crept in, and the word appeared as "bottle-scarred."

EMINENT GEOLOGIST SPEAKS

Dr. Frank Adams of the National Research Council gave a most interesting lecture on "Geology and Minerals of the Far East," on Friday at Lethbridge, Alberta.

Dr. Adams is a well known geologist and scientist with a world reputation. He is Emeritus Vice-Principal of McGill University and was formerly head of the Department of Geology and Paleontology in Geology and the Faculty of Applied Science and Dean of the Graduate School at McGill.

Dr. Adams' works are of a varied character, but one of the most outstanding contributions he has made to science was on the fowage, or rocks. As a result of his experiments and researches, he determined that no cracks or cavities can exist in the earth's surface at depths greater than about eleven miles from the surface, due to the fact that all rocks will flow under temperatures and pressures at that depth. Many outstanding contributions have been

LAYING HOUSES FOR COLD CLIMATE

The type of house best suited for laying hens in the winter season depends to a considerable extent on the severity of the climate. At the Lethbridge, Alta. Experimental Station, where the temperature at times drops thirty degrees or more below zero, a house that would be quite suitable in a milder part of Canada is liable to cause freezing of combs, and a consequent reduction of eggs. After considerable experience and experimental work the Lethbridge Station has erected a house which, while still airy, gives satisfactory results. The house is of shed roof type with double tar paper on both sides of the walls and the walls and ceilings packed with six inches of planer shavings. It is twenty feet deep and eighty-four feet long and is divided with light single board partitions into rooms fourteen feet wide. Each room accommodates six heavy breed birds or seventy-two of the lighter breeds. The front of the house is one-third lumber and the balance glass and cotton. A door opens outside from each room. Ventilation is obtained through adjustable cotton and glass windows and on warm days the doors are left open. The temperature was taken from day to day from a thermometer placed in the east end room of the inside wall which is in front of the roosts, on a level with the birds when at roost. The lowest temperature recorded in a day was twenty-one degrees above zero with an outside temperature of thirty-four degrees below zero. In another house having gable roof with straw loft and unpacked walls the temperature fell to three degrees below zero. In the warmer house the birds at no time during the winter appeared to be uncomfortable.

In his report of the Station, which is operated by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, Mr. W. H. Fairfield, the Superintendent, points out that while the humidity was greater than in the colder house the birds were not more prevalent than in the previous year when the birds were kept in more open houses.

GREAT LIGHT IS

A flaming sword of light, so bright that it can illuminate the streets of a town 125 miles away, is the new Lindbergh Beacon, two billion candle power strong, which is located 600 feet above Chicago's pavements atop a skyscraper. Its purpose is to guide aviators at night, and it is the gift of the late Elmer A. Sperry, its designer, as a memorial to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's lone flight from New York to Paris in 1927. Describing this powerful light as a "star which might be seen by the 'man in the moon,'" The Literary Digest continues:

"Lights were dimmed on the lofty roof, and all eyes turned to the tower above, topped by the light platform which stands 600 feet above the street. Just at 9 p.m. a bell tinkled. "From the platform two beams of light shot out through the muck. Above the immense 2,000,000,000 candle-power lamp sat its dark blue swath through the haze in a reflected ray sixty inches in diameter. Below it, the 1,100,000,000 candle-light, thirty-six inches in diameter, but weak in comparison to its brother, was trained on the Municipal Airport, and will remain fixed to point the way for night air visitors."

"For a few seconds the big light was held stationary, pointed to the southwest, then it began a leisurely turn, touching the loop skyscrapers as it went. The new Merchandise Mart, already lit up with lights, was given added brilliance by the beam; the Mather tower loomed out of the darkness as the light brought it into view, and a degree or two farther east the beam gilded the flag-staff of the Tribune tower and illuminated the mosquito dome of the Medinah Athletic Club."

"This extraordinary beacon consists of two lights, one mounted above the other. The lower light has an output of 1,100,000,000 candle-power, which is brought, by a parabolic reflector, into a beam thirty-six inches in diameter, and is fixed so as to direct visiting airmen to the Municipal Airport. "The upper light is the beacon proper. It has an output of 2,000,000,000 candle-power, brought into a beam five feet in diameter, and revolved at the rate of two revolutions per minute."

"The beacon is supported by a structural steel tower, totally encased in aluminum, rising sixty-five feet above the penthouse of the Palmolive Building, which gives the light a total elevation of 600 feet. "It is seen that the intensity of this giant flambeau, comparable with the magnitude of the moon's reflected light, is vastly something more than man has hitherto been compelled to reckon with. It is estimated that it will be serviceable to aviators for a radius of about 300 miles."

Her Husband Had Boils on Arms and Legs

Mrs. Russell Laird, 454 Bagot St., Kingston, Ont., writes:—"About a year ago my husband was terribly bothered with boils on his arms and legs, and couldn't get any thing to clear them up for any length of time. He went to doctors, and the medicine they gave him would make them disappear, but they would come back in no time. One day I was reading the newspaper and saw where Burdock Blood Bitters was advertised for this trouble, so I decided to try it, and he hadn't taken much more than one bottle when his skin was all cleared up. We think B. B. B. is a wonderful medicine."

Be Prepared!

You start out on this new year with certain hopes. To what extent you will be able to carry out your plans depends, in large measure, on whether or not you are physically and mentally healthy, and so able to do everything you wish to do.

Illness or lack of health may so interfere with and upset your intentions that the year will be a disappointment to you. The result may be that you will be unable to achieve what you have set out to do, and so you will miss the happiness that should be yours.

In order to avoid unhappiness, in order to prevent, as far as possible, any interference, through illness, with your work and play, it is absolutely necessary that you prepare yourself for the year which is before you.

It is nothing less than a gamble to go ahead trusting that everything is alright now, and that it will continue to be alright, and it may be that, in your case, this attitude will lead to disaster.

The sensible thing is to be prepared. You have nothing to lose and much to gain through making sure that your body is in a healthy condition, and consider the satisfaction you experience in being told that you may fairly rely upon its being able to do the work you are planning and that it is not apt to break down during the year.

The best way to bring yourself into the ranks of those who are prepared is to have a health examination by your family physician. A thorough and complete examination of your body will reveal any abnormal condition which may be present, unknown to you. The advantage of having such a condition detected is that you may secure treatment and have the trouble corrected before it has had time to do any damage.

It may be necessary to change your manner of living somewhat in order to keep your body in good condition. Quite thoughtlessly, you may be abusing your body by not eating the right kinds of food, you may be over eating, or, in some such way, you may be causing your body to wear out. Your doctor will tell you if this is so, and by following his advice, you will prevent a premature wearing-out and breaking down of the body machine.

The idea we wish to convey is that instead of waiting until you become ill, and then calling your doctor in to patch you up and get you back into a normal healthy condition, you go to him once a year for an examination and to receive his advice on how to keep well. Do not wait until you are ill. Consult your doctor while you are well in order that he may keep you well.

Prepare for the year that is ahead.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripped, all druggists today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

BAD BILIOUS SPELLS EVERY TWO WEEKS

Mrs. John McIntyre, Osborn, Sask., writes: "For years I had bad bilious spells, and they would come on every two weeks. I tried lots of different medicines until I found out about Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and they proved to be just the remedy I required. I have not had even one spell in the last four years."

guess that lettuce wasn't picked out of trees?" Having an axe to grind, Lella swallowed a snappy retort. "If you will spread up the ground south of the garage, Bill," she suggested sweetly, "I'll do the rest, and you know you eat more vegetables than I do."

"Nothing doing!" was Bill's ungallant rejoinder. Lella looked aggrieved. "Oh, well, if you'd rather pay exorbitant prices for worry, radishes and woody carrots that have fresh green things, just for the gathering, all right. It's the urban complex, I suppose."

Mr. Hamilton glanced quickly at his slim, smartly attired daughter. "I'll arrange to have the ground spread, my dear, and I shouldn't wonder if our new neighbor could give you some good gardening advice. They're tacked their own yard in business-like fashion."

"Excuse me," said one whose six feet of height permitted him to look over the high-board fence comfortably, "aren't you going to make some drills before you sow your seeds?"

Lella glanced up, luckily unconscious of the smudge of earth on her flushed face. To the tanned young man on the other side of the fence it proved but an added charm. "Drills?" she repeated vaguely.

"Furrows, you know. Wait a minute, I'll show you." Picking up a ball of twine and a couple of stakes, he vaulted the fence with athletic ease. "Lettuce!" he chuckled, after introducing himself as Donald Thompson, "and I was certain that my intervention was in behalf of sweet alyssum or blue cornflower—you see your eyes are just that shade of—"

"Yes to be a strictly vegetarian garden," interrupted Lella with some haste, unloading several more packages of seed from the pocket of her smock.

"In other words, utilitarian," said Donald, deftly rolling the lettuce seed between his thumb and forefinger and dropping them into the neat drill he had opened up with the aid of a pointed stick and his taut twine.

Three weeks later Lella squealed ecstatically at the sight of some tiny, green shoots which had popped out of the ground overnight.

"What's showing," came a voice from the next yard.

"Oh, do come and see!" exclaimed Lella excitedly. "I haven't the faintest idea what we planted in this plot."

"Carrots," announced Donald after a brief examination of the green specks.

"Are your carrots up yet, Mr. Thompson?" inquired Lella, politely, secretly hoping that her own were the more enterprising.

"Not a carrot," admitted Donald. "I guess I may as well confess that I didn't plant a thing except flower seeds."

Lella registered faint disapproval. She privately considered such impudence on the part of a young husband deplorable.

Meanwhile, Donald marveled that a girl who looked like a pink and white wind flower could feel so exercised over a carrot bed.

It was on a Sunday evening a few weeks later that Bill, who had long since expressed his unqualified approval of the crisp salads and appetizing vegetables that found their way from Lella's garden patch to his plate, praised, with wily intent, certain radishes then in their prime.

As he knew she would, Lella soon strolled to the garden to pull some of the rose red beauties for tea.

"There's sweet peas, that's for—let's say for friendship," chanted Donald, presenting a huge bunch of butterfly blossoms over the fence.

"How utterly gorgeous!" cried Lella. "And passing from the sublime to the eatable, do you think your wife would care for some nice radishes?"

"My wife!" exclaimed Donald in astonishment. "I haven't got a wife, and I can truthfully assure that I'll never have one unless you—"

"Then, who—" began Lella, as rosy red as her radishes.

"Why, Carrie's my sister. My twin sister at that."

At Last! The Truth About PIMPLES

Pimples, acne and blackheads are caused by a "rundown," disordered system, by "harmful acids" and toxins which make your skin break out. So if you want to rid yourself of that ugly, blemished complexion and to obtain beautiful, smooth and soft skin for all times—eyes sparkling like diamonds—superb daily health—take Kruschen Salts.

Kruschen Salts are a perfect blend of the six vital salts which nerves, glands, blood and body organs ought to receive from food if they're to work properly—but it's simply impossible to obtain these salts in these days of modern cooking!

Therefore take Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—this quickly puts back these precious minerals into your system—and drives out harmful acids and toxins, assuring you enviable and glorious youthful beauty and health.

"If I could only think of something to give father something really nice!" The clear young voice was distinctly worried.

"It's just the same every Christmas; I never know what he wants and there are so many things he doesn't care for. Mother's present is hard enough to choose, but dad's is real puzzle. Honestly, I spend hours trying to think of something."

"Yes, I presume it's quite a task."

"Do you know, gram, I've saved enough for that short fur coat I want! I can get it this week and it is a peach!"

Grandma said slowly: "Wasn't it last year that your father bought you that beautiful coat—the one with all the fur on it? I remember that he didn't buy that set of books he wanted so badly—he was so anxious to have you get just the kind of coat you wanted."

"The old voice was very gentle, but Helen stared at her grandmother for a second with surprise; that remark didn't sound like quiet little gram."

"Well, of course, he did buy me that coat—but every single girl in our crowd has a fur coat and, anyway, gram, I do think dad reads too much. He's got a whole library full of books now; it's rather foolish to have so many books just cluttered around."

Grandma folded a pair of hose with a tightening of her lips.

"I expect so," she returned, rather wearily, "and I don't doubt he'll get more pleasure out of seeing you in the fur coat than he would if he bought something for himself, only"—her voice was a little unsteady now—"I keep thinking, somehow, of the years when he was so heart hungry for books, the years when he needed so much and had so little, because you children need everything."

"I recall the time when he went without a winter coat all one bitter winter—wore a chamolva vest under a light coat and saved enough to buy a warm fur robe for your baby carriage. My, but he was the proud young father, pushing you along the street, wrapped up in that white fur like a little bunny!" She laughed gently.

"Funny, isn't it—the things one remembers? He isn't as young now as he was when he went without a single days vacation for two years, and sent you and mother on that lovely trip to England—but he hasn't changed a bit; he'll still go without things to provide for the rest of us."

She smiled at the pretty girl opposite and then rose to greet a tall, tired-looking man who entered the room. Helen watched her father stoop to kiss the wrinkled cheek sootily.

Grandma Pettit glanced over at her young granddaughter, with a gleam of fun in her kind old eyes. She reached for another sock from the well-stocked basket and contentedly surveyed the yawning hole in the large toe.

"Now this boy of mine—your 50-year-old daddy—what he needs is a cast-iron pair of hose; he always did need that!"

She looked at the lovely face before her. Surely no 20-year-old girl was ever prettier! If she was a little spoiled—grandma had helped to do it—she admitted it.

"Tell you gram, what I've decided; I've a good idea. Helen bit her gold pencil, frowning at her long list.

"Daddy has most everything—so I'll get that picture I'm so crazy about—the dancing girl, you know, that stunning thing in red and black down at Gamble's. I've coveted it for six months, and it will be wonderful in the hall, don't you think?"

"Es—your father doesn't spend much time in the hall, does he? Of course, the picture is very nice—"

Grandma's voice was very queer, but Helen, a happy smile on her face, didn't notice it. She was busy crossing a name off the list.

There was silence in the sunny room. Grandma turned a sock, with another brief glance at her granddaughter. Then she said: "Where's your mother? I haven't seen her for hours."

"Oh, she's down in the laundry, washing out some of my best 'undies. Jane tears them so, mother does them herself; she loves to do it, and she does it so quickly and easily, you know."

Helen spoke absent-mindedly, then her brow brightened.

She smiled at the pretty girl opposite and then rose to greet a tall, tired-looking man who entered the room. Helen watched her father stoop to kiss the wrinkled cheek sootily.

"Hello, Helen, working on the Christmas list? I wish you folks seem like the ones that deserve the most don't always get it, either. I've noticed that real often. Especially if they don't expect very much."

Grandma Pettit glanced over at her young granddaughter, with a gleam of fun in her kind old eyes. She reached for another sock from the well-stocked basket and contentedly surveyed the yawning hole in the large toe.

"Now this boy of mine—your 50-year-old daddy—what he needs is a cast-iron pair of hose; he always did need that!"

She looked at the lovely face before her. Surely no 20-year-old girl was ever prettier! If she was a little spoiled—grandma had helped to do it—she admitted it.

"Tell you gram, what I've decided; I've a good idea. Helen bit her gold pencil, frowning at her long list.

"Daddy has most everything—so I'll get that picture I'm so crazy about—the dancing girl, you know, that stunning thing in red and black down at Gamble's. I've coveted it for six months, and it will be wonderful in the hall, don't you think?"

"Es—your father doesn't spend much time in the hall, does he? Of course, the picture is very nice—"

Grandma's voice was very queer, but Helen, a happy smile on her face, didn't notice it. She was busy crossing a name off the list.

There was silence in the sunny room. Grandma turned a sock, with another brief glance at her granddaughter. Then she said: "Where's your mother? I haven't seen her for hours."

"Oh, she's down in the laundry, washing out some of my best 'undies. Jane tears them so, mother does them herself; she loves to do it, and she does it so quickly and easily, you know."

Helen spoke absent-mindedly, then her brow brightened.

"You know, gram, I've saved enough for that short fur coat I want! I can get it this week and it is a peach!"

Grandma said slowly: "Wasn't it last year that your father bought you that beautiful coat—the one with all the fur on it? I remember that he didn't buy that set of books he wanted so

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE LONG KEEP WEDDING SECRETS

Thayer friends of Miss Wilma Lowen Sparks were given a surprise on Monday evening, December 14, when that young lady returned from an extended stay at her home in Wetaskiwin, Alberta, Canada, and announced that she had been the bride of Mr. Kenneth Ogg of Thayer, since August 6, 1930.

While Dame Rumor had concealed the names of these popular young people for the last several weeks, only a limited few who knew that a wedding had taken place.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Ogg, on the evening of August 6, the Rev. C. Swan, pastor of the Thayer church, officiating at the ceremony which was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith, Miss Mary Ogg, the latter a sister of the bridegroom.

Since Mrs. Ogg had already made a trip to her home in Alberta upon completion of her work in Thayer high school in the spring and had received her passport, it was decided to keep the wedding a secret until she returned.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Sparks of Wetaskiwin, Alberta, and was born in Canada, though her father is a former Minn. emigrant, a son of Mrs. J. W. Sparks of this city. She was reared in Canada and educated in the schools of Alberta, although she came to Thayer to complete her high school education being graduated with the Class of 1930.

The bride is an attractive and vivacious young woman, gifted with fine personality and talented musician. She is a capable musician, playing both violin and piano, and also appears in voice parts in high school here she also showed an aptitude for athletics. She has been active in the younger circles of the Christian church, where she was a faithful worker.

The bridegroom was born and reared on the farm owned by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Ogg, on Road 3. In fact he was born in the same house in which he was married. He attended Oak Grove school and then entered into a partnership with his father on the farm. Kenneth is a young man, steady, clean and industrious and well worthy of his young bride. Both will receive the congratulations of scores of friends and admirers, who will wish for them the acme of what life can give.

Mr. Ogg has rented the farm of Mrs. A. L. Palmer, which lies three and three-quarter miles north and a mile west of Thayer. He will take his bride there after March 1. In the meantime they will make their residence with the parents of the bridegroom—Thayer News, Kansas.

SEES LETHBRIDGE AS AIR MAIL CENTER

Lethbridge, Jan. 12.—Lethbridge will most certainly be a central point in western air mail services in a comparatively short time, said Squadron Leader J. H. Tudhope of Ottawa, who, in company with J. McLean, aviation inspector of the C.N.A., spent Friday night in the city.

"The air route from Lethbridge to Vancouver through the Crow's Nest has been approved as the most logical way to the coast following a survey which was carried out during the past summer."

Captain Tudhope explained that emergency fields along the new route had been picked out on an aerial survey of every twenty miles. They had been surveyed in detail and clearing and grading will be undertaken as soon as possible.

Although all emergency fields along the new air route from Lethbridge to Vancouver via Lethbridge are not yet completed, the service will be run as closely as possible without the aid of beacon and radio beacon stations.

ARCTIC TO ORIENT AIR ROUTE WOULD INCLUDE ALBERTA

Washington, D.C., Jan. 13.—An air route near the top of the world to the Orient is envisioned by W. Irving Glover, assistant United States postmaster general in charge of air mail.

He termed his idea "nebulous" and lying far in the future but sees the first step undertaken in the proposed loop of Canadian and United States lines by air mail service between Winnipeg and St. Paul and Minneapolis.

This line would join the United States set work of mail routes with existing Canadian routes, which run from Winnipeg to Regina, Calgary and Edmonton. There is a gap between Edmonton and McEwen, which is to be closed and a line continues due north to Alaska.

Senators along the northern line, Mr. Glover said, a route could be traced across Alaska and Bering Strait into Soviet Russia and down to China and Japan.

APPOINT BOARD FOR RESOURCES

Edmonton, Jan. 13.—Appointment of a board of natural resources, advisory to the Minister of Lands and Mines, was announced on Monday by Hon. R. G. Reid, Minister in charge of the department. The personnel of the board is: R. J. Dinning, chairman; Dr. R. C. Wallace and Dr. F. A. Wyatt.

The general purpose of the board will be to advise the Minister on all matters pertaining to the policy of the newly created Department of Lands and Mines.

It is the same time the Minister announced the appointment of John Harvey, in charge of the lands branch of the department, to be acting deputy minister.

The new board will commence to function immediately, while Mr. Harvey's acting appointment also goes into effect right away.

Mr. Reid pointed out that the work of the new organization will be advisory rather than administrative, and it will sit either at the call of the Minister or the chairman.

He further stated that the board will be the best informed body in the province on all matters pertaining to the lands and minerals of the province and that its findings of fact in regard to mineral problems undoubtedly would have an influence in affecting the decisions of the Government.

The board is advisory, none of the members will devote full time to it and work thereon will be supplementary to their main vocations.

The first meeting is expected to be held in the near future.

PACIFIC COAST FARMERS WOULD EXCLUDE ORIENTALS

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 12.—Exclusion of Orientals from the ownership or control of farms in the province, and submission by the dominion government of a stated case to the Supreme Court of Canada, to determine the validity of the British Columbia government's legislation to restrict a similar restriction to wider limits, is sought in a petition presented to the provincial government by the White Canada association of Vancouver.

Eight hundred signatures are on the petition.

In the preamble of the document the petitioners set out they are farmers in various sections of British Columbia, on whose property of white farming communities, and view "with very serious alarm the constantly growing number of Orientals who are acquiring the ownership and leasing of lands in this province, both on the coast and in many of the interior districts."

The petition asks that provincial legislation be passed at the next session of the legislature, prohibiting the acquisition, whether by purchase, lease, or otherwise, from owning, leasing, or acquiring them by any other means.

This provincial government is also requested by the petitioners to request the dominion government to withdraw its case before the Supreme Court of Canada without delay, and to submit a new case, not only of the power of the dominion and provincial legislatures, to pass on similar matters, but also to fix the powers of municipalities to control trade in a similar respect.

When with the merchants who are petitioning the government.

Victoria, B.C., Jan. 12.—Rich new resources of coal, oil, gas and minerals, in addition to the vast agriculture and timber lands, have been added to the future wealth of British Columbia by acquisition of the Peace River Block. It has become apparent since the inception of a survey of the area undertaken by the provincial government in association with the two transcontinental railway systems. While detailed reports of the surveys which were under the direction of Major G. R. Crossley, have not yet been presented, indications pointing to important discoveries in the lands recently ceded to the province from Federal control have been brought to the attention of the provincial authorities, has been learned.

DOMINION WILL SOON PRODUCE NEEDED BUTTER

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 12.—Canada will be producing all the butter she requires within two years and the question of importing butter from New Zealand and Australia will then no longer be one of prime importance to the dairy industry in this country. This view was expressed by Dr. J. A. Riddick, dairy commissioner, Friday. Dr. Riddick had been discussing the situation with an English exporter who called him up Friday morning from London with respect to the re-exporting of New Zealand and Australian butter to Canada. He explained that considerable butter comes from the Antipodes to Canada by that route.

The low price of grain is having a stimulating effect on butter production in Canada.

COTTON MILLS CLOSE; 20,000 WORKERS IDLE

Barnley, England, Jan. 12.—Seventy cotton mills were shut down today and 20,000 workers thrown into idleness in accordance with the lock-out declared last week after 5,000 weavers in nine mills had struck in protest against the so-called more looms per weaver system.

The lockout became effective at noon Saturday, but today was the first full working day when the effects of the order could be fully visualized. The week-end produced no move toward negotiation.

If next Saturday's lockout materializes, 250,000 weavers will be affected and an equal number of spinners also will lose their jobs.

MUST PROMOTE CANADIAN GOODS

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 13.—Necessity for unremitting effort in promoting the sale of Canadian products in foreign markets, was emphasized by Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of commerce, during an address last night to representatives of the British Columbia salmon industry meeting here. Exporters are face to face with a new period in the history of merchandising, the minister said, which would require the exercise of their full energies in developing international trade.

In expressing the hope that the industry would find expanding markets in Canada, Mr. Stevens said that many of the country's finer foodstuffs had not been sufficiently appreciated.

The Perils of Indoor Bathing

—as told by an experienced bather

It's pretty risky—this bathing business. Even an experienced bather like myself never knows when a sneeze is going to sneak up on him. The water has to be just right; towels must be heated in advance; most important of all, the room itself must be as warm as toast. We babies can't afford to take any chances with chilly breezes.

FOR baby's bath—to keep the room in a constant glow of warmth—to banish drafts that menace baby's health—an ELECTRIC HEATER is indispensable. So easy to move around, to turn on or off at will—just the thing for these getting-colder days. Safe, clean, smokeless.

At the Calgary Power Company's Merchandise Showrooms you will find a wide assortment of handy electric heaters attractively priced.

A wide range of modern electrical appliances may now be purchased direct from the Calgary Power Company on a small down payment—the balance to be paid with your regular monthly light bill.

Just as Good!!

Ask Yourself—Is It?

When you ask for a certain line of goods, a line which you have seen advertised in newspapers—and you are told "Here is something just as good and cheaper," it is time to do some thinking. If there is more profit in selling goods not advertised and you are buying at a saving, there must be something wrong somewhere—and usually that is loss of quality—something left out that is THERE in the advertised commodity you originally asked for.

It is well to remember that a manufacturer invests his good dollars in advertising space because he knows his product is right. The fact that he advertises in newspapers so that "the who runs may read" is evidence that he knows his claims are right, and that he is ready to stand behind his merchandise and the stores that sell it.

FIND ROBIN EGGS IN NEW MADE NEST

Jasper, Alta., Jan. 10.—Residents of this mountain town are telling each other that spring is already here, because Vernon Sitter, school boy, walking recently along the Cabin Creek trail, discovered three blue robin eggs in a newly-made nest in a spruce tree. Although he was unable to find the parent birds the eggs were still warm.

The robin is the first bird to return to this part of the Rocky Mountains in the spring. No previous record exists, however, of its eggs having been discovered before May or June.

CONSERVATIVES WIN IN EDMONTON BY ELECTION

Edmonton, Jan. 10.—Conservatives held the vacant Edmonton seat in the provincial legislature when their candidate, Col. F. C. Jamieson, K.C., was elected by a large majority in a by-election here Friday.

With Capt. J. C. Bowen and Jan. Lakeman, Communist, eliminated, the standing on the third and final count was:

Jamieson, Conservative 9,176
Bowen, Labor in the 1st round 6,658
Majority for Jamieson 2,520

Nearly 18,000 voters went to the polls to elect a member to the seat made vacant by the recent death of Col. C. Y. Weaver, Conservative who was one of the six city members at the last provincial general election last June.

The race was largely between the Conservative and Labor candidates, Liberal and Communist nominees being far from the goal at all times.

The Labor candidate had the official and active support of Premier Brownlee in the campaign, this greatly augmenting interest in the contest from the outset.

PRIME MINISTER CLAIMS WEST NOT BAD AS DEPICTED

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—Premier Bennett, on returning to his office today told newspaper men that from what he had learned in the west conditions there had been considerably exaggerated.

ESTIMATE ALBERTA'S OIL PRODUCTION AT 1,404,700 BARRELS

Based on official government production figures for ten months and an estimate for two months, the total oil production in Alberta during 1930 was 1,404,700 barrels, according to a statement issued by Hon. Thomas G. Murphy, minister of the interior, which was received in Calgary last week.

The production is stated to be made up of 1,386,000 barrels of naphtha from the Turner Valley field, 104,000 barrels of light crude oil from Turner Valley and Red Coles, and 14,700 barrels of heavy crude from Wainwright and Ribstone.

McFARLAND WARNS LARGE CARRYOVER OF WHEAT LIKELY

"With world prices for wheat at ruinously low levels far below the cost of production, there should be no alarm felt if there is a large carryover in Canada at the end of July," it was stated in an interview this morning by John I. McFarland, general manager of the Canadian Wheat Pool. Mr. McFarland's statement is as follows:

"During the past few months there has been, in Canada and abroad, much discussion, unfavorable comment, and adverse criticism of the so-called holding policy of Canadian wheat sellers during the past few years, resulting in larger than normal carryover stocks of wheat at the end of the cereal years.

"The present sales policy is based on orderly marketing, as I defined it a few days ago. The producers of this Dominion are selling their wheat to importing countries at world prices, as, and when, it is required by such countries and will continue doing so. It is only fair, however, to state that while world prices remain at such ruinously low levels, we should not be alarmed if we have on hand a large carryover at the end of July.

"Wheat was 50 cents in store Fort William only a few days ago, the lowest price at which No. 1 Northern has ever sold. We know our farmers cannot produce another crop at any where, near that price. In other words, our people can buy wheat at the present time at much less than it can produce it on our farms. It is a vastly different proposition to carry over a portion of this high grade crop at these prices than it was during the past three years when values were well over two and three times the present prices, and when in two recent years Canada carried over 127,000,000 bushels.

"It will be surprising if our competitors in Argentina and Australia do not hold similar views. We know grain merchants and agriculturists in importing countries do not appreciate the present extremely low prices and would welcome an advance in exporting countries." — Manitoba Free Press.

Tells Dyspeptics What To Eat

Strict diets are often unnecessary in stomach trouble. While some foods do produce excessive acidity and many stomachs do generate "too much acid" causing gas, sourness, bloating and after-dinner pains, the trouble may be safely and quickly corrected by the use of a good alkaline. Bisurated Magnesia—powder or tablets—is ideal for this purpose. Just a little after meals neutralizes all the excess acid, prevents souring, breaks up gas and ends indigestion. Favorite foods no longer upset stomach and digestion is easy and painless. It will do all this for you or money back. Druggists everywhere sell Bisurated Magnesia with this guarantee.

President Hoover sent greetings recently from the White House to the National W.C.T.U. Convention in Houston, Texas, in which he expressed his profound sense of the value of their work both in behalf of higher ideals of life and public service and aid of law and order.

Our White Ribbon Tiding Correspondent, Mrs. Cooke of Edmonton, in League on the air, busy at their old tactics of sophistry and pleas to "keep the bootlegger out of our fair province," and pleading the cause of true temperance, telling half truths, thinking temperance people do not read the staggering facts available in the Liquor Control reports; that are "that there is less drinking now than a flat contradiction of their claims in prohibition days," urges our women to send to the government for the reports. They cost only a few cents. To read them and mark the appalling progress of the trade in liquor with the human wreckage toll you will need no other arguments save those found in the Control Board reports.

Our Provincial President, Mrs. McKinnery, believes while there is an honest effort on the part of the hotel men to conduct the beer rooms "according to law," yet their influence in the community is so obviously demoralizing and the easy access to unlimited supplies is such an inducement to excessive drinking, as well as temptation through its social aspects that they should no longer be tolerated.

WEEKLY STOCK MARKET REPORT

The following is a weekly report from the Edmonton Stock Yards, prepared by a Times representative, for the week ending January 13th:

Receipts: Cattle, 835; calves, 115; hogs, 1778; sheep, 401.

Under heavier receipts, there has been considerably more activity noticeable on the cattle market. Trading has been quite keen and salesmen have found no difficulty in clearing their offerings readily, particularly of the better grades of butcher cattle. Prices on the whole have been showing a decidedly strong tone and are about 10 per cent higher than last week's quotations, with buyers not grading quite so closely on medium kinds.

Good to choice fed calves selling at $6.50 to $7.50. The general run of good to choice butcher steers and heifers are bringing $5.75 to $6.25, odd ones bringing a little more, common to mediums $4.50 to $5.50. Good to choice butcher cows $4.00 to $4.50, common to mediums $3.50 to $3.75. Canners and cutters $1.50 to $2.50; bulls $2.25 to $2.75.

There is not much action noticeable on the stocker and feeder market, although there are some enquiries for stocker heifers and cows. Bulk of the stocker and feeder steers selling generally at $4.25 to $4.75, odd ones as high as $5.00, stocker heifers $4.25 to $4.75, and stocker cows $3.00 to $4.00.

Calf market is strong, bulk of the good to choice light vealers selling at $9.00 to $10.00, common to mediums $5.00 to $7.00.

The hog market is inclined to be firmer but unsettled. Today (Tuesday) the heavy end of the hogs sold at $8.75 for bacon and at $9.00 for the lighter end, with select bringing a 50c premium and butchers being discounted per hundred. Cuts on the offgrade hogs are unchanged and are, as follows: Heavies $1.50, extra heavies $2.50, No. 1 sows $2.50, No. 2 sows $3.00 to $4.00 and rough hogs $4.00.

The sheep and lamb market is showing a firm tone. Bulk of the good to choice light ewes selling at $7.00 to $7.50, yearlings at $5.00 to $5.50 and ewes at $3.50 to $4.50.

run into. Another thing, there is always the weather against you.

Take the case of Lew Jones, our present councillor. I've never been able to figure out whether Lew is a farmer, doing councillor work in his spare time, or a councillor puttingter about at farming when municipal business is quiet.

I met Lew, along the last of the dry spell, when the roads were in dandy shape. "Pretty good weather we're having, Lew," I remarked, thinking more of the roads.

Lew sort of scowled. "Call this good weather?" he grumbled. "If we don't get rain, and lots of it inside of the next few days, my whole crop will be a fizzle. I'm figuring right now as to whether I won't re-seed the whole business."

We got the rain, as much as anybody wanted — and more. After the first downpour, we had some hot muggy weather, with thunderstorms every now and again. It was grand growing weather, and we were all glad to see the hay and the grain shoot up.

When I saw Lew I said, thinking of his crop that was saved, "Wonderful growing weather we're having, Lew."

But this time, too, Lew looked rather glum. "Weather!" he snapped. "My good gosh, man! Look at the roads! They're fierce, and getting worse. They haven't been dry enough to run a mailman over since the weather broke. Three culverts got washed out. I've got a couple of men watching the bridge over the creek — had them there for days, keeping the drift from piling up and washing the bridge out. If this keeps up, I'll have all my road money spent and not a darn thing to show for it but a road in worse shape than it has been for years — and everybody kicking!"

"Too bad, Lew," I sympathized with him. "But you will have to admit that the rain saved the crop for it's looking dandy right now."

Lew turned away. "I haven't time to even think of crops these days," he said gloomily. "Let alone talk of 'em. Right now I've got to go and rustle some planking for a culvert that a truck bust in yesterday, and some guys to fix it — or the municipality will be facing a bill for damages. So long!"

Poor old Lew! He hasn't got time to attend to his farm property, or to do what he wants to, as councillor and when he sees a man coming to his shack, he's always in a lather in case it's more trouble — or bridges, or a car accident. He claims that before he was a councillor, folks all nodded and said "How'd ye do, Lew," and passed along to their business, but now every single soul he meets wants to stop and talk about chances to get a little road work on their own private side roads. An hour or two is nothing to them, and if he hasn't enough money to splash where they want it, well he's a rogue and a crook — and no good as a councillor. If it isn't a road they want, it is something else. It's worse than a dog's life, he says, lots of kick and no apence, with everybody jumping on him the more he tries to please them.

No! I wouldn't like to be a municipal councillor — especially after hearing Lew talk. Lew says he's fed up with it all, and that he'll never run for election again.

I'll bet Lew will stand and get in. You couldn't keep him out of it. From which, I figure there's some folks who are never really happy unless they're always being "pepped" up by worry.

FIRST ACTION IN 1931 SESSION TO BE ON $45,000,000 RELIEF BILL

Washington, Jan. 5.—The $45,000,000 drought relief appropriation was submitted to the house today with the recommendation that it be approved immediately so the agricultural department may begin making loans to farmers.

The measure was reported by the appropriations committee with the explanation that the "full amount of the authorization is recommended in order that there may be ample funds to carry out the provisions of the laws."

Hydro-Electricity on the Farm in Western Canada

(By Frederick Wright)

The tremendous advance that has been made within recent years in Canada in the use of machinery on the farm has turned the thoughts of agriculturists more and more to electricity as the motive force of the more complete mechanization of the farming industry.

Possibly the remarkable spread of manufacturing generally throughout the Dominion, made possible by the utilization of scattered water powers in the form of hydro-electricity, has not been without its effect in bringing home to the farmer the possibility of this labor-saving force in the development of his own industry. And especially is this the case, since world wide economic conditions have forced down the prices of farm products, the effect of which is disastrous of present cost of production.

Be that as it may, those who have to do with the development of Canada's water powers have for some time been planning towards supplying electric current to the rural districts. Particularly is this the case in Western Canada where machinery has reduced human labor on the farm to almost a negligible quantity. This tendency on the part of the power interests towards rural electrification is well epitomized in an article in "The Commerce of the Nation," by Mr. Reginald H. Dean, a director of Nesbitt, Thomson and Company, who have financed more hydro-power developments than any other agency. Mr. Dean says that: "A tremendous field for the consumption of electrical energy in Western Canada looms up in the agricultural industry. There would seem to be no doubt but that the present era of farm mechanization will be followed by that of farm electrification, and there is general systematic planning to this end. Considering that there is now about 250,000 farms in the West with it, was both an education and a valuable experience. Moving about the country, however, as he had done, he had observed with some regret the great lack of knowledge of Canada and of the overseas Empire generally, a slowness to appreciate the genius, the tradition, the history, and too often in spite of the unsympathetic attitude of Great Britain, there had evolved quite naturally that potent invisible tie that bound the Empire together and bound Canada to the Mother Country.

"I have," he said, "formed the opinion, slowly but surely, that the lax appreciation of these things of Empire to which I have referred, so far as Canada is concerned, can in some measure be laid at the door of Canadians. We are too prone in speaking of Canada, and in our government and other literature to stress unduly the physical and material changes to the neglect of the story and teachings of Canadian history and tradition, the things that fire the imagination of men and stir their patriotism. The truth is now emphasizing—it needs emphasizing—that the history and tradition of the old and the new—of this country and of Canada—are inseparably woven into one fabric and are part and parcel of each other.

"My own experience has been that the working and middle class people of this country—the class to whom Canada should make the strongest appeal as a new homeland—in fact, all classes in this country are keen to learn of Canada, her development, her natural wealth, and particularly her early history. Halls are filled; question time is always interesting; always some wait behind for further information. I find the same in business men. When the purely business argument has not quite succeeded, the Empire appeal has tipped the scale on more than one occasion.

"There are other causes for this lack of knowledge. It is well to recognize that in a densely populated industrial country it is inevitable that many people have little or no horizon beyond themselves and their work. Environmental limitations, often it broadens it. The finer things of Empire need to be brought home to the people, equally with the physical and material, consistently and in attractive form, both in this country and in Canada. In Canada, however, I think it is both fair and correct to say that the background and the vision of Empire are perhaps stronger than in the Old Land.

"The Empire outlook, indeed, needs remodelling, it needs broadening. The spiritual side of Empire needs reviving in these islands, whence came, for the greater part, the founders of Canada. . . . And the future of it all lies in a closer and finer understanding each of the other, a closer co-operation in material things between this country and Canada. Each needs the other; each is in large measure, the logical complement of the other; but, above all, there is wanted a strong, clear, mutual understanding and conception of all those things that stir men inwardly—silk threads that become interwoven almost imperceptibly throughout the years of history into an intangible fabric that binds a people and makes a nation and an Empire really great."

MISTAKES THAT COST CANADA MILLIONS

(Toronto Financial Post)

Periods of depression always bring in their wake distress that is the result of selfishness, extravagance or inefficiency in business. Thus the world learns economic wisdom through experience. The price we pay to learn the lesson is very often enormous.

What has Canada lost through the mismanagement of the wheat pool, controlling fifty per cent of Canada's crop?

What has Canada lost through the reckless over-expansion of the newspaper industry based upon one of our primary natural resources?

What has Canada lost through extravagant and unwarranted speculation in mining shares, accompanied by the swindling of the public through brokerage houses whose methods had the tacit approval and even the concerted cooperation of government officials and highly placed politicians? No one can accurately estimate losses, but in each case they run or will before the situations correct themselves—into nine figures.

We are paying a high price for our experience in these matters. But let us gain some economic wisdom from them.

From the wheat fiasco we learn that the law of supply and demand still rules, that private individuals make bad bedfellows, that marketing and governments are alike powerless to maintain uneconomic levels of systems that are the products of decades of evolution are more efficient than synthetic systems evolved overnight, that individual initiative has a most useful function to perform.

From the newspaper broglio we learn again that the law of supply and demand still rules, that private individuals and governments are alike powerless to maintain uneconomic levels of price, that politics and business make bad bedfellows, that the interest of customers must be given consideration, that financiers do not make the best industrial managers, that greedy exploitations of natural resources brings its trial scenes of grief, that even the highest quality of technical knowledge can be nullified by unsound expansion.

From the collapse of the mining boom we learn that paper fortunes cannot be built more quickly than sources of new wealth are opened up, that gambling is not the kind of speculation that aids development, that the public is gullible but not for long, that standards of ethics are more powerful influences in sound business than laws, but that laws are necessary for the protection of the public, that selfishness among politicians is something that always always be guarded against. These are the lessons. Have we learned them?

The importance of retaining wood areas, and of reforestation, need hardly be mentioned, if we are to keep a reasonable measure of moisture in Alberta—we have not enough as it is in probably half our seasons. Mr. Adam's points are well worth consideration.—Red Deer Advertiser.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sour. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

HILLSIDE U.F.A.

The regular monthly meeting was held in the school house on Friday, January 8th, there being a good turnout of members and visitors also, a sprinkling of ladies.

Reports were submitted for the dance held January 2nd and the moving picture entertainment to be held Friday, January 15th.

The secretary read a communication from Mr. D. Cameron, B.Sc., intimating that he will be at Hillside on January 30th, to give a lecture on "Research and Agriculture." Everybody is invited to come and hear Mr. Cameron on this subject, as advance notices inform us this lecture is something worth while.

A letter was read from the Wetaskiwin Riding U.F.A. Debating League notifying the Hillside Local that they had been drawn to debate against Gwynne U.F.A. on the subject "Resolved, that the retention of the beer parlors would not be in the best interest of the people of Alberta." Hillside will take the negative, and Messrs. E. R. Hoskins, J. O. Harvey and W. C. Dowdell were chosen as the debaters from Hillside.

Considerable time was given over to the discussion of resolutions for the instruction of the delegate to the annual convention.

A committee was appointed to work in conjunction with the Hillside U.F.A. to prepare a program for the joint entertainment to be held March 20th.

The matter of the purchase of sports grounds adjacent to the school was discussed, but was tabled until the next regular meeting, owing to the lateness of the hour.

It was decided to hold the next regular monthly meeting in the school house on Tuesday, February 10th. The meeting then adjourned.

NEARLY 1,500 ENTRIES FOR EDMONTON SHOW

Edmonton, Jan. 12.—The annual Edmonton poultry show opened here this afternoon with the excellent entry list of 1,452 including many Calgary birds.

So heavy is the task of the judges that P. J. Timms of Calgary, veteran secretary of the Provincial Poultry Association, has been requested to assist in placing the general classes.

The showing of waterfowl is a feature this year with over 100 entries in both geese and ducks, besides the ornamental breeds. The showing of mammoth bronze turkeys is also a strong one.

THROUGH THE RYE

(By Walt Mason)
If a gangman kills a gangman, while dispensing rye, why call the police? Moral answers: Echo answers, "why?" Moral sentiments are "smothered" as we sometimes feel, that the tough who kills another, aids the public weal. Since the gangsters are confined in their ranks, we have no excuse for pinning, we should murmur "Thanks." If a killer kills and killer, coming through with rye, I thought quite a moral pillar, do not mourn or sigh. "This old world is growing brighter." I remark, "indeed, when a blighter kills a blighter—let the work proceed. Let the terror slay the terror, for his gang or tongue—but this attitude is error, it is mildly wrong. When we see the statutes flouted, we should rise and wall, "Let the murder gangs be routed—order must prevail. Men who scorn the Constitution, slaying everywhere, should be killed for execution, by the rope or chair. Let the sword of wrath be polished, from the rust hummed; rampant crime must be abolished, or the country's doomed. If a sinner shoots a sinner, in the Highgate Lodge, justice still should be a winner, and refuse to do it. It is vicious to be saying, "They're gangsters all; let the critters keep on slaying, for the loss is small." If a shooter shoots a shooter in the bootleg game, we don't need a legal tutor to perceive the shame. Gangs indulge in merrymaking at the law's expense; if this sort of thing were taking, we have little sense. Let the scoundrels be outdriven, by good men on guard; if to them an inch is given, they will take a yard.

MEDITATION FOR THIS WEEK
"For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself."—Rom. 14:7.

"We ascend by one another. We live by one another's blessings, as we die by one another's cursings. No man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself. We live to each other, not only to God, but to each other."—"Wherever in this world I am in, whatever estate, I have a fellowship with hearts to keep and cultivate. A work of lowly love to do For Him on whom I wait."

WEARING OFF SEASON

(Walt Mason)
The New Year's day upcoming, and I am thinking hard of sins that need extirpation—what sins I shall discard? Each year I have been pledging myself to better things, and while my friends were hedging I kept my vows, by jings. Long since I used to borrow a ruble here and there, which habit brought me sorrow, and forty kinds of cure. All blushing I admit it, but I had sense enough one New Year's day to quit it—and quitting is not stuff. I used to call for flagons and pannikins of beer, and kept the brewers' wagons in action through the year. Rejecting every warning I pulled this foolish chore, until, one New Year morning, I vowed I'd drink no more. I used to be a glutton; I'd eat without a rest, until each blooming button flew off my straining vest. All day the tired domestic was cooking things to eat my paunch was so majestic I couldn't see my feet. My jaded bones were sagging beneath this greivous load, and I grew tired of dragging the tallow up the road. And so, one New Year morning, I cried aloud, "By James, hereafter I'll be scoring the glutton's foolish games. I will not sit consuming cooked victuals all the day, but when my hunger's booming I'll eat a plate of hay." I made these divers pledges, and half a hundred more, and tamped them down with wedges, and nailed them to the door. And they have made me happy, and they have made me strong, so life seems blithe and snappy and full of joy and song. So I believe in swearing upon the New Year day to quit all foolish faring, to quit the reckless way.

Hydro-Electricity on the Farm in Western Canada

(By Frederick Wright)

The tremendous advance that has been made within recent years in Canada, in the use of machinery on the farm has turned the thoughts of agriculturists more and more to electricity as the motive force of the more complete mechanization of the farming industry.

Possibly the remarkable spread of manufacturing generally throughout the Dominion, made possible by the utilization of scattered water power in the form of hydro-electricity, has not been without its effect in bringing home to the farmer the possibilities of this labor-saving force in the development of his own industry. And especially is this the case, since world wide economic conditions have forced down the prices of farm products, the effect of which is disastrous of present cost of production.

Be that as it may, those who have to do with the development of Canada's water powers have for some time been planning towards supplying electric current to the rural districts. Particularly is this the case in Western Canada where machinery has reduced human labor on the farm to almost a negligible quantity. This tendency on the part of the power interests towards rural electrification is well epitomized in an article in "The Commerce of the Nation," by Mr. Reginald H. Dean, a director of Nesbitt, Thomson and Company, who have financed more hydro-power developments than any other agency. Mr. Dean says that: "A tremendous field for the consumption of electrical energy in Western Canada looms up in the agricultural industry. There would seem to be no doubt but that the present era of farm mechanization will be followed by that of farm electrification, and there is general systematic planning to this end. Considering that there is now about 250,000 farms in the western provinces, and that the number is steadily increasing as new areas are opened to settlement and that this process will continue for some time, the scope of electrical utilization there, as benefits are gradually extended to the rural districts, may be roughly gauged."

In the same article Mr. Dean gives a very instructive outline of the general hydro situation in Western Canada, part of which is as follows:

"There are other significant changes coming over the hydro-electric development situation in Canada, the principal of which is the wider and more general distribution of electric current. A striking feature of recent years has been the auspicious opening of Western Canada's era of water power development, foreshadowing a tremendous and ever increasing installation and consumption in that territory. In 1910 the horsepower installed in Western Canada represented little more than 10 per cent of the Dominion total. In 1920 it represented 17 per cent. In 1930, despite the great progress made in installation in Ontario and Quebec during the decade, the ratio remained the same. Every indication is given that from now on the western provinces which they are actually responsible.

"Altogether the potential development of Western Canada is substantial, amounting to 12,579,500 horsepower, or 38 per cent of Dominion potentiality. Realization of this potentiality and developments following out of this in recent years have quite a significant bearing on the future. Between 1921 and 1927 only 337,708 h.p. was added to the turbine installation of Western Canada, or about 14 per cent of the Dominion's installation in the period, though this effected a doubling in the amount of power developed. During 1928 British Columbia and Manitoba alike accounted for approximately 80 per cent of Dominion installation in that year. In 1929 new installation in Western Canada was equal to a little over 10 per cent of the total Dominion installation. The figure declined because that year was for the western territory one of planning rather than a completion of projects and as a result 1930 will see the total of western accomplishment considerably swelled. The use of electrical energy will contribute to the progress of this activity, and mining and water power development will proceed hand in hand in Western Canada."

MR. GREENFIELD GIVES TALK ON CANADA AT BANQUET

The large and representative company which attended the complimentary dinner to F. A. Pauline and Herbert Greenfield at the Hotel Victoria, London, on Monday evening, testified to the esteem in which these gentlemen are held, and the general regret that is felt at their retirement from the positions of agent-general for British Columbia and Alberta respectively at the end of the year.

In the course of his reply to the toast "Our Guests," Mr. Greenfield said that the beautiful silver tray presented as a souvenir of his stay in London would be much in evidence in his future home in Calgary.

Proceeding, Mr. Greenfield said to live in England, with the advantages than an official position carried with it, was both an education and a valuable experience. Moving about the country, however, as he had done, he had observed with some regret the great lack of knowledge of Canada and of the overseas Empire generally, a slowness to appreciate the genius, the tradition, out of which, through the years of history, and too often in spite of the unsympathetic attitude of Great Britain, there had evolved quite naturally that potent invisible tie that bound the Empire together and bound Canada to the Mother Country.

"I have," he said, "formed the opinion, slowly but surely, that the best appreciation of these things of Empire to which I have referred, so far as Canada is concerned, can in some measure be laid at the door of Canadians. We are too prone to speaking of Canada, and in our government and other literature, to stress unduly the physical and material changes of the subject of the story and teachings of Canadian history and tradition, the things that fire the imagination of men and stir their patriotism. The truth is worth emphasizing—it needs emphasizing—that the history and tradition of the old and the new—of this country and of Canada—are inseparably woven into one fabric and are part and parcel of each other."

"My own experience has been that working and middle class people of this country—the class to whom Canada should make the strongest appeal as a new homeland—in fact, all classes in this country are keen to learn of Canada, her development, her natural wealth, and particularly her early history. Halls are filled; question time is always interesting; always some wait behind for further information. I find the same in business men. When the purely business argument has not quite succeeded, the Empire appeal has tipped the scale on more than one occasion."

"There are other causes for this lack of knowledge. It is well to recognize that in a densely populated industrial country it is inevitable that many people have little or no horizon beyond themselves and their work. Environment limits its outlook, as often it broadens it. The same things of Empire need to be brought home to the people, equally with the physical and material, consistently and in attractive form, both in this country and in Canada. In Canada, however, I think it is both fair and correct to say that the background and the vision of Empire are perhaps stronger than in the Old Land."

"The Empire outlook, indeed, needs remodelling, it needs broadening. The spiritual side of Empire needs reviving in these islands, whence came, for the greater part, the founders of Canada. . . . And the future of it all lies in a closer and finer understanding each of the other, a closer co-operation in material things between this country and Canada. Each needs the other; each is, in large measure, the logical complement of the other; but, above all, there is wanted a strong, clear, mutual understanding and conception of all those things that stir men inwardly—silk threads that become interwoven almost imperceptibly throughout the years of history into an intangible fabric that binds a people and makes a nation and an Empire really great."

MISTAKES THAT COST CANADA MILLIONS

(Toronto Financial Post)

Periods of depression always bring in their wake distress that is the result of selfishness, extravagance or inefficiency in business. Thus the world learns economic wisdom through experience. The price we pay to learn the lesson is very often enormous.

What has Canada lost through the mismanagement of the wheat pool, controlling fifty per cent of Canada's crop?

What has Canada lost through the reckless over-expansion of the newsprint industry based upon one of our primary natural resources?

What has Canada lost through extravagant and unwarranted speculation in mining shares, accompanied by the swindling of the public through brokerage houses whose methods had the tact approval and even the concerted cooperation of government officials and highly placed politicians?

No one can accurately estimate losses, but in each case they run—will before the situations correct themselves—into nine figures.

We are paying a high price for our experience in these matters. But let us gain some economic wisdom from them.

From the wheat fiasco we learn that the law of supply and demand still rules, that private individuals, that politics and business make bad bedfellows, that marketing and governments are alike powerless to maintain uneconomic levels of systems that are the products of decades of evolution are more efficient than synthetic systems evolved overnight, that individual initiative had a most useful function to perform.

From the newsprint broglio we learn again that the law of supply and demand still rules, that private individuals and governments are alike powerless to maintain uneconomic levels of price, that politics and business make bad bedfellows, that the interest of customers must be given consideration, that financiers do not make the best industrial managers, that greedy exploitations of natural resources brings its trial scenes of grief, that even the highest quality of technical knowledge can be nullified by unsound expansion.

From the collapse of the mining boom we learn that paper fortunes cannot be built more quickly than sources of new wealth are opened up, that gambling is not the kind of speculation that aids development, that the public is gullible but not for long, that standards of ethics are more powerful influences in sound business than laws, but that laws are necessary for the protection of the public, that selfishness among politicians is something that always always be guarded against.

These are the lessons. Have we learned them?

VALUE OF RE-FORESTRATION

Mr. Francois Adam, one of the pioneers of Camrose, perhaps the father of that enterprising burg was a visitor in Red Deer on Friday with his daughter, Mrs. W. C. Pringle, on his way to Napa, Baha, Island, for the winter. Mr. Adam is a civil engineer by profession and has been working for the government in the north country; he has been at Hythe for two and a half years.

Mr. Adam came out from Belgium to Western Canada forty-five years ago, back in 1885, and has travelled and worked over a great deal of the West; he worked with the Grand Trunk Pacific for twelve years, and has a ranch at Duhamel. He is much interested in the reforestation of a measure of wooded areas in Alberta. He sets out the gains this way:

1. The retaining of moisture in all townships.
2. The lessening of the force of fierce winds by windbreaks.
3. The setting apart of sanctuaries for birds and wild game.
4. Reforestation—the renewing of wood supplies.

Mr. Adam would set apart two sections in each township, preferably the eleventh and twenty-ninth, if available, for the purposes outlined above. There would have to be care of the wooded areas from fire and waste, but he believes the two sections, besides supplying moisture and windbreaks and bird sanctuaries, would afford sufficient wood for all the residents of the section.

WHAT many people call indigestion is very often merely excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never get crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

HILLSIDE U.F.A.

The regular monthly meeting was held in the school house on Friday, January 9th, there being a good turn out of members and visitors also a sprinkling of ladies.

Reports were submitted for the dance held, January 2nd, and the moving picture entertainment to be held Friday, January 16th.

The secretary read a communication from Mr. D. Cameron, B.Sc., intimating that he will be at Hillside on January 30th, to give a lecture on "Research and Agriculture." Every body is invited to come and hear Mr. Cameron on this subject, as advance notices inform us this lecture is something worth while.

A letter was read from the Wetaskiwin Riding U.F.A. Debating League notifying the Hillside Local that they had been drawn to debate against Gwynne U.F.A. on the subject "Resolved, that the riding of horses in the parlor would not be in the best interest of the people of Alberta."

Hillside will take the negative, and Messrs. E. R. Hoskins, J. O. Harvey and W. C. Dowdell were chosen as the debaters from Hillside.

Considerable time was given over to the discussion of resolutions for the instruction of the delegate to the annual convention.

A committee was appointed to work in conjunction with the Hillside U.F.A. to prepare a program for the joint entertainment to be held March 20th.

The matter of the purchase of sports grounds adjacent to the school was discussed, but was tabled until the next regular meeting, owing to the lateness of the hour.

It was decided to hold the next regular monthly meeting in the school house on Tuesday, February 10th. The meeting then adjourned.

NEARLY 1,500 ENTRIES FOR EDMONTON SHOW

Edmonton, Jan. 12.—The annual Edmonton poultry show opened here this afternoon with the excellent entry list of 1,482 including many Calgary birds.

So heavy is the task of the judges that P. J. Timms of Calgary, veteran secretary of the Provincial Poultry Association, has been requested to assist in placing the general classes.

The showing of waterfowl is feature this year with over 100 entries in both geese and ducks, besides the ornamental birds. The showing of mammoth bronze turkeys is also a strong one.

THROUGH THE RYE

(By Walt Mason)

If a gangster kills a gangster while dispensing rye, why call it the public hangman? Echo answers "why?" Moral sentiments are smothered, as we sometimes feel, that the tough who kills another, aids the public weal. Since the gangsters are confining murder to their ranks, we have no excuse for pining, we should murmur "Thanks." If a killer kills and killer, coming through with rye, I, though quite a moral pillar, do not mourn or sigh. "This old world is growing brighter," I remark, "indeed, when a blighter kills a blighter—let the work proceed. Let the terror slay the terror, for his going or tong"—but this attitude is error, it is mildly wrong. When we see the statutes flouted, we should rise and wail. "Let the murder gangs be routed—order must prevail. Men who scorn the Constitution, playing everywhere, should be haled for execution, by the rope or chair. Let the sword of wrath be polished, from the rust exhumed; rampant crime must be abolished, or the country's doomed. If a glimmer shoots a sinner, in the Highback Lodge, justice still should be a winner, and refuse to dodge. It is vicious to be saying, "They are gangsters all; let the critters keep on playing, for the loss is small." If a shooter shoots a shooter in the bootleg game, we don't need a legal tutor to perceive the shame. Gangs including in merrymaking the law's expense; if this sort of thing we're taking, we have little sense. Let the scoundrels be outdriven, by good men on guard; if to them an inch is given, they will take a yard.

MEDITATION FOR THIS WEEK

"For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself."—Rom. 14:7.

"We ascend by one another. We live by one another's blessings, as we die by one another's curings. No man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself. We live and die not only to God, but to each other."—"Wherever in this world I am, in whatever estate, I have a fellowship with hearts to keep and cultivate. A work of lowly love to do for him on whom I wait."

WIESENFORD W.I.

The regular monthly meeting was held January 8th, at Mrs. Neff's, with nine members present and three visitors.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Newbold, and opened by singing "O Canada," and reciting the first stanza of the creed. Roll call was answered by each member giving a New Year's resolution, which they were to enforce during the year.

A paper on "Legislation" was read by Mrs. Fulcher and a humorous reading by Mrs. Newbold. A demonstration in knitting a child's pullover sweater and garter was given by Mrs. Newbold.

Ways and means of making talent money were discussed and several good ideas were exchanged. Mrs. Fulcher is giving her home for a card party, January 30th. Prizes for ladies and men, both first and consolation, will be given, and lunch served by the W.I. members.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. Neff.

SWearing OFF SEASON

(Walt Mason)

The New Year's day upcoming, and I am thinking hard of sins that need entombing—what sins I shall discard? Each year I have been pledging myself to better things, and while my friends were hedging I kept my vows, by jings. Long since I used to borrow a ruble here and there, which habit brought me sorrow, and forty kinds of care. All blushing I admit it, but I had sense enough one New Year's day to quit it—and quitting is hot stuff. I used to call for dragons and paniniks of beer, and kept the brewers' wagons in action through the year. Rejecting every warning I pulled this foolish chore, until, one New Year morning, I vowed I'd drink no more. I used to be a glutton; I'd eat without a rest, until each blooming button flew off my straining vest. All day the tired domestic was cooking things to eat my paunch was so majestic I couldn't see my feet. My faded bones were sagging beneath this grievous load, and I grew tired of dragging the tallow up the road. And so, one New Year morning, I cried aloud, "By James, hereafter I'll be scoring the glutton's foolish games. I will not sit consuming cooked victuals all the day, but when my hunger's booming I'll eat a plate of may." I made these divers pledges, and half a hundred more, and tamped them down with wedges, and nailed them to the door. And they have made me happy, and they have made me strong, so life seems blithe and snappy and full of joy and song. So I believe in swearing upon the New Year day to quit all foolish faring, to quit the reckless way.

His ribbons, dress goods, coats and hats would scare a belfry full of bats, and cobwebs frame his door. Bill thinks to advertise would cost just twice as much as he has lost in waiting for a buyer.

But Henry Dash across the way, knows advertising's sure to pay — it draws crowds like a fire. So to our office he come down, for the best sales service in the town, announcing special offers. He gives his trade a chance to save; his profits he can closely shave — the volume fills his coffers.
